August 27th, 2009

Dear Valued Customer:

PTI has not passed to its customer base three increases since January 2009 in an effort to wait out slow economic conditions and pending recovery. PTI drew on reserves from eased pricing late in 2008. Our raw material suppliers continue to move upward citing recent automotive and export gains beyond our ability to continue to absorb their increases to us. The most recent implemented increases from our raw material suppliers force us to raise the prices of our Polyethylene Products 8%. This increase only reflects what our suppliers have given to us. This increase is effective on all shipments made beginning September 28th, 2009. To insure your shipment is made before this date orders should be placed before September 7th. Current lead times are 21 days on custom items.

To verify the increases in public format please see CMAI Index, Plastics News Index, and Plastic Technology Magazines July edition page 33 article entitled "Commodity Prices up Sharply." You may also reference recent Wall Street Journal headlines on Exxon Chemical Company and other primary suppliers of resin. Plastics News and Plastics Technology have very detailed coverage of raw material to refer to on most common resins. I can also supply specific vendor letters if you require them.

PTI appreciates your business and works to ensure you have the best solution and lowest possible market cost for that solution. Your ideas and questions are always appreciated so please let us know if we can do anything to help you or you have suggestions for us. PTI remains a value in the market with very strong demand and will continue to pass along only after careful consideration the increases that are absolutely necessary to the continued proper support of our customer base.

Sincerely,

Plastic Technology Incorporated
